CLOVERPORT HIGH SCHOOL CLOSES

With Splendid Commencement--
J. S. Dickey Addresses Large Audience--Graduates Honor School and Themselves--Special Musical Numbers Rendered.

PROF. CULTON IS DELIGHTED

The commencement exercises of the Cloverport High School were held in the Methodist church Thursday evening, May the twenty-third. Mr. Eldred Babbage, Miss Rose Elizabeth Newton and Miss Eula Moorman McCracken were the graduates, and each one delivered a creditable address. After Mr. J. S. Dickey spoke, Prof. Culton presented the graduates with real sheep-skin diplomas.

Special music was prepared for the evening, the accompanists being the Misses May and Miss Lula Severs. The different musical numbers rendered are given on the program which is published in another column. Prof. Culton was delighted with the evening's entertainment, and appreciated the efforts of all those who made the commencement one to be happily remembered by the graduates.

The church was beautifully decorated in flowers and yellow and purple bunting. The graduates were laden with roses and gifts at the close of the exercises. The flower girls were: Misses Mabel McCracken, Tula Babbage and Francis Sawyer.

Among those who sat under the white bunting were the trustees and their families who are: Messrs. Chas. Hamman, J. P. Keith, John M. Gregory, R. Oelze and Chas. Keil. The teachers: Prof. McCoy, Mrs. McCoy, Misses Roe, Misses Leonora McGavock and Fra. Hendrick.

The ushers were: Willie Seaton, Darnell Gregory, Raphael Lewis, Joe Ross, James Fitch, Fred Adams, Byron Whitehead and Earl Bohler.

Mail Carried in Auto.

Oscar Dowell carrier on Irvington Rural Route No. 1, was in Hardinsburg Monday getting his auto, purchased from J. Hook. He will place the machine on his route and do away with horses and wagon. He says he will save four or five hours time which he can spend at home doing other work, save money and give the patrons along the route better service. Mr. Dowell is a real live wire on a mail route and with his machine will be equal to two live wires.

Photographer Going Away.

Mr. Brabandt says he will leave for Little Rock, on June 15th, where he has a position. Anyone wanting photos made will please have sitting made before that date.

Mrs. Piggott Delivers Address Here Yesterday.

Mrs. Walter J. Piggott, of Irvington, was the special guest of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Methodist Church yesterday afternoon. The mission of Mrs. Piggott's visit was to bring a report from the Woman's Missionary Council which met in Birmingham, Alabama, April and from the annual meeting of the society at Elkhorn in May. She is the fourth vice president of the Louisville conference and has charge of the home mission, social service and local work. This department of the society is being developed throughout the south. The women and men of the church are educating themselves to the splendid plans perfected by this organization and are taking hold of it with enthusiasm.

After Mrs. Piggott's address a reception was given in her honor.

Confederate Veterans.

Chattanooga, May 26--Thousands of Confederate Veterans and their families and friends are pouring into Chattanooga today to attend the annual Confederate reunion which meets here.

May 27. General Bennett H. Young, Kentucky is already on the ground, and has approved the arrangements to entertain the veterans.

Lost Fine Mare.

A. W. Foote, Irvington Rural Route 2, had a fine $200 mare to die of last week.

Revival Services.

Evangelistic services will be held during the entire month of June, beginning next Sunday at the Baptist church and continuing two weeks, followed by a two weeks' meeting at the Methodist church, beginning the third Sunday. While it is not a union meeting, yet it will be of mutual advantage to both congregations to have the meetings come in close connection as was seen last year. Last year the Methodists began and the Baptists followed, this year the meetings will be in reverse order.

Dr. A. S. Pettie, of Owensboro, will aid in the Baptist meeting and Dr. will assist in the Methodist meeting.

Dr. Pettie and Bro. Cottrell will attend the meeting of the State Board of Missions on Monday night and Tuesday of next week, so that the first service after the services Sunday will be on Tuesday night, then there will be two services a day through the continuation of the meeting, at 3 o'clock and 7:45. As the services were to continue for a month, it was felt best not to begin the public services until the evangelist came, so the services of prayer and song were called in for this week. By a concentration of effort, these meetings ought to result in great good for Cloverport, and each congregation will get out of the meetings in results just what they put in in effort.

Entertain Kentuckian.

Mr. and Mrs. P. C. Conn, 503 Euclid Avenue, entertained Dr. George Shively of Stephensport, Ky., who stopped for the day enroute to San Diego. The trip to the beaches and different points of interest was made by automobile, and the doctor left with a most delighted impression of Southern California and Los Angeles, especially--Los Angeles Evening Herald.

Black Lick Society.

The Black Lick Baptist Woman's Missionary Society will be entertained by their president, Mrs. Kate Jones at Glen Dean this afternoon. Among those who will take part are: Mrs. Lillie Moorman, Miss Evelyn Cooper, Miss Gladys Harlow, Miss Rosa Weller, Mrs. Emma Robertson, Mrs. Jessie Dean, Mrs. J. M. Cooper, Mrs. W. E. Cooper, Mrs. Sallie D. Bailey, Mrs. J. M. Craig and Mrs. Kate Jones.

Filed Their Petitions.

The following candidates have filed their petitions to enter the August primaries. They are: Arthur Beard, Republican candidate for Sheriff; Jesse Miller, Democratic candidate for Representative, and John N. Akers, Republican candidate for County Judge.

BEAUTIFUL SERVICE.

Held Sunday Afternoon At The Lucile Memorial In Memory of Mrs. Ella May Simons--Several Old Friends Pay Tribute To Her Memory.

Is it worth while to spend your whole life for others and have for its center the church? The question was answered Sunday afternoon in the beautiful service held in memory of Mrs. Ella May Simons, who died last February in Denver, Colorado.

The services were conducted by the Rev. Mr. Waggoner, the pastor, and Miss Lula Severs had charge of the music. Sweet solos were sung by Mrs. L. T. Reid and Miss Edith Plank. Several lovely tributes were paid by three or four of her friends who knew her from childhood and it was an inspiration to hear what was said of her sincere life. Bro. Waggoner followed the remarks with an appropriate sermon and prayers were offered in gratitude for the association of this good woman and for the future of her children and husband. Resolutions written by Miss Laura Satterfield were read by the pastor. They were a true sketch of the life of her friend and a copy of them will be sent to the family and one kept on the church records of the Lucile Memorial.

Nice, Cool Office.

Dr. W. B. Taylor, the Irvington dentist, has installed two fans in his dental office. They are run by a small engine in the back office where he has other machinery, useful and convenient in his business. When you go in his office and take a seat in his chair to have your tooth pulled, he just turns on a fan and you forget the pains.

Visit In California.

Dr. Shively, who made the trip to California recently, stopped over a day at Los Angeles with Mr. and Mrs. Pike Conn, who, he says, were delighted to see him, took him a ninety seven miles' tour of the country in an auto. He says Mr. and Mrs. Conn are enjoying good health, both are busy and doing well. They wished to be remembered to all their friends back in old Kentucky, and especially, in Stephensport.

Qualified as Executors.

Dr. W. Board qualified as executor of the estate of Mrs. S. J. Tucker, and Will Chaney as executor of the estate of John C. Chaney.

ANDREW CRAWFORD,

Of Stephensport, An Old and Highly Respected Citizen, Dies of Heart Failure May 20.

Stephensport, May 24.-(Special.) On last Tuesday morning when the news of Mr. Andrew Crawford's sudden death flew over the village, a cry of universal grief and sympathy seemed to fill the place, for every one felt that the best beloved and most honored citizen had gone.

Though not a native of the place he had for fifty years thoroughly identified himself with the people, and every one has some story of kindness and wise counsel received from him. He was born in 1840, near Toronto, Canada, and came to Stephensport in 1862, a very young man. Shortly afterwards he went to Louisville to be with his step-brother, the late James Clark, a prominent tobacconist of that time. After being with him a year, and learning every detail of the tobacco business, he returned to Stephensport to enter into partnership with his brother, the late James Crawford. For many years the firm was widely known and carried on an extensive business.

In 1865 he married Miss Alice Moorman, of Stephensport, who survives him. To her the hearts of her friends go out in deepest sympathy, for all knew of his perfect devotion and the beautiful harmony of their married life.

Coming from sturdy Scotch stock, with the blood of the Covenanters in his veins, he was brought up in the rigid faith of the Presbyterian church, but later became a most devout member of the Baptist church in Stephensport. He was also a most staunch and loyal member of the Masonic order, and it is said of him that he had never missed a meeting of the lodge when at home.

After the service at the church the beautiful burial service of the order was read at the grave. The large concourse of friends gathered at the church and the many and most exquisite flowers laid upon his grave all testified to the loving esteem in which he was held.

A gentleman and a scholar; a man who daily walked with God--when shall we see his like again?

Card of Thanks

Comparative Digestibility of Food

Made with different Baking Powders

From a Series of Elaborate Chemical Tests:

An equal quantity of bread (biscuit) was made with each of three different kinds of baking powder--cream of tartar, phosphate, and alum--and submitted separately to the action of the digestive fluid, each for the same length of time.

The relative percentage of the food digested is shown as follows:

Bread made with

Royal Cream of Tartar Powder:

100 Per Cent. Digested

Bread made with phosphate powder:

68 1/4 Per Cent. Digested

Bread made with alum powder:

67 3/4 Per Cent. Digested

These tests, which are absolutely reliable and unprejudiced, make plain a fact of great importance to everyone: Food raised with Royal, a cream of tartar Baking Powder, is shown to be entirely digestible, while the alum and phosphate powders are found to largely retard the digestion of the food made from them.

Undigested food is not only wasted food, but it is the source of very many bodily ailments.

ANTI-BOOTLEGGER ACT

Sustained--You Can Not Carry It For a Friend Into Local Option Territory--Fine From $20 to $100

Frankfort, Ky.--Construing the 'anti-bootleggers act,' known as the Frost Bill, passed in 1912, the Court of Appeals took a long step towards making Kentucky a dry state in fact if not in name. The conviction of Isaac Pope, of Leslie county, for carrying a bottle of whisky into local option territory to accommodate Robert Walker, was sustained. The opinion handed down by Judge Lassing, and as a result of its construction any person or corporation carrying intoxicating liquors into local option territory, even for accommodation, except common carriers to licensed druggists, are liable to a fine of from $20 to $100 and from 10 to 20 days in jail or both. The Appellate court was unanimous in the opinion handed down by Judge Lassing. Walker gave Pope $1 to buy a quart of whisky. It was agreed that Pope got nothing for carrying the whisky, not even a drink of it.

Postponed.

Children's Day Services at the Methodist Church, in Stephensport, will be held second Sunday in June. They were postponed last Sunday on account of the death of Bro. Andrew Crawford.

BIG SALE OF CATTLE.

Taylor Watkins and Others Sell 1,500 Head at Eight Cents.

Mr. Taylor Watkins, of this city, and a number of other stock dealers interested with him are disposing of their stock fed cattle at better prices than the market last week would seem to indicate. Practically all of the 1,500 fed at Athertonville have been disposed of at eight cents. Six carloads of these cattle were sold this week on the Cincinnati and Pittsburg markets. The cattle at Athertonville averaged somewhere close to 1,200 pounds at this average weight and at eight cents the price they brought the sale would aggregate $135,000. The firm on the Bourbon Stock Yards, of which Mr. Watkins is the senior member, owned a fourth interest and a very handsome profit has been realized. This is probably the largest cattle sale in Kentucky this year.---Elizabethtown News.

New Marshal.

Allen Jennings has resigned as City Marshal, and Hiliary Hardin appointed in his place.

Planted Ten Acres Of Tobacco.

Perkins and French, of Ammons, planted ten acres of tobacco last week. It was the first big planting in the county. Plants generally are short and very little tobacco has been set out.

Oelze, C. W. Hamman, Leon McCracken, Lafe Behen and Jno. D. Babbage. James Bishop was in command of the boat.

WOMAN COULD NOT WALK

She Was So Ill—Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Pentwater, Mich.—"A year ago I was very weak and the doctor said I had a serious displacement. I had backache and bearing down pains so bad that I could not sit in a chair or walk across the floor and I was in severe pain all the time. I felt discouraged as I had taken everything I could think of and was no better. I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and now I am strong and healthy."—Mrs. ALICE DARLING, R.F.D. Peoria, Ill.—"I had such backaches that I could hardly stand on my feet. I would feel like crying out lots of times, and had such a heavy feeling in my right side. I had such terrible dull headaches every day and they would make me feel so drowsy and sleepy all the time, yet I could not sleep at night."

"After I had taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a week I began to improve. My backache was less and that heavy feeling in my side went away. I continued to take the Compound and am cured."

vision, progressive but conservative as well. Kentucky annually collects and expends more than $7,000,000. On account of careless management of her fiscal affairs an annual deficit has been accumulating for several years, and now amounts to more than $1,500,000. Our Representatives and Senators must take part in disposing of this indebtedness and providing a remedy against its recurrence if the people are honestly and ably represented. If not a tale of woe will follow, for Kentuckians find no pleasure in pauperizing their State. County pride, district pride and love for advancement, ought to stir up the people in this part of the State to measure up to any other part of Kentucky in selecting men of worth as their Representatives.—Adair County News.

THE KIND OF MAN NEEDED.

We need in this county a man to run county affairs. A man who is not afraid. He should not only be able to do things himself, but he should have the talent to inspire his associates in office with enthusiasm to do the best work possible for their county. He should not wait to be told, to be urged to work for the good of the county, but he should have the good sense and judgment to see the needs of the county and set about doing them.

ANDREW CRAWFORD.

From Stephensport comes an interesting sketch of the life of Andrew Crawford. In that place he spent a half century—a long time to live without getting tired, without losing patience, without missing a meeting of his lodge, without lagging in his devotion to his church and town. All men who are trying to walk in the same path as a useful and honest citizen, can take courage from him who finished his journey last Tuesday and be grateful that they knew Andrew Crawford.

IMPROVE LAND WITH LIME.

From the Elizabethtown News we are publishing an article "Lime on Land," showing what has been and can be accomplished on the farms in Hardin county. What is true of Hardin county is also true of Breckenridge county. Here we have the ground stone in abundance and inexpensive. Our farms need lime. Farmers should take advantage of their opportunities to improve their lands.

There are quite a number of fellows running for office in this county before the primary election August 2. Every Democrat in the county is interested in the primary to the extent that every candidate in the field be given a square deal. This is a family fight, and it is not necessary in prosecuting the claims of any one man that the character or standing of another be made to suffer. The candidates, we think, are pretty generally well known, and the voters are going to select a ticket out of the bunch that suits them. This should be done in a well ordered, old-fashioned Democratic way, and after the battle there will be no old sores to patch up. This being the line-up, and a majority to those who succeed good and proper, the ticket will be elected in November. Let all good Democrats see to it that no hard feelings are brought about by reason of this election, which at present is interesting and keeping the boys busy who are looking ahead for a job.

The farmer is the most popular man today. Sometimes we almost get jealous of the attention he is demanding—the articles that are written of his opportunities, the meetings that are held for his benefit and the magazines that are published in his behalf. We do not read half so much about banking or journalism or religion. Farm improvement is the popular movement, and the newspapers, merchants and every man, except the farmer, has to pull for himself. Every now and then, between the columns that are devoted to agriculture, one runs across an article of wisdom concerning something else besides farm improvement. What does this all mean? One thing sure is, this proves that carrying for the soil is most important. And that is why we are publishing this week the valuable article of Jesse R. Eskridge.

The Democrats of the South are making a kick against President Wilson's present tariff bill because they say that it seriously affects the price of their staple product—cotton. There are 1,500 establishments in the South which manufacture cotton, having a combined capital something like $700,000,000.

In a great many counties in the State the candidates before the

DEMOCRATS IN HANCOCK

Have A Love Feast And Get-Together Conference—They Are Hopeful And Determined. Whitworth Speaks.

In response to the call made by the chairman, J. S. Gregory, the Democratic committee candidates and a number of voters met in the office next the exchange, and on roll call all the members were present, except Mr. Ed Dowell, of Yellow Creek, and he was represented by proxy. The meeting was harmonious throughout. Many problems of interest to the local candidates were thrashed out to the entire satisfaction of all concerned. Mr. Whitworth, of Hardinsburg, was present and was tendered the chairman's place for the occasion, this he declined in a few appropriate words, but later gave the committee a talk which was appreciated by all present. Mr. Joe Lemastus, of Easton, tendered his resignation as a committeeman from that precinct, the same was accepted. W. T. White, of Utility, candidate for sheriff, presented his resignation as the committeeman from Utility precinct, the same was accepted and Saturday, June 1, 1913 at 1 p. m. was set as the time of filling the vacancies. The committee went on record, endorsing the State primary law. They also went on record, denouncing illegal use of either money or whiskey to influence voters at any and all elections. This ended the business portion of the meeting. The rest of the time was devoted to fun and fun making, in all, they were a jolly, hopeful set, each determined to win by fair means if he could, but if defeat was his lot, to do his best to elect the whole Democratic ticket in the November election.—Clarion.

Legal Opinion.
"A cat sits on my back fence every night and her yowls and yowls and yowls. Now, I don't want to have any trouble with neighbor Jones, but this thing has gone far enough, and I want you to tell me what to do."

The young lawyer looked as solemn as an old sick owl, and said not a word.

"I have a right to shoot the cat, haven't I?"

"I would hardly say that," replied young Coke Blackstone. "The cat does not belong to you, as I understand it."

"No, but the fence does."

"Then," concluded the light of law, "I think it safe to say you have a perfect right to tear down the fence."

CHAPTER XI.

THAT was a terrible hour for J. Wallingford Speed. As for Larry, once he had grasped the full significance of the telegram, he became a different person. Some fierce electric charge wrought a chemical alteration in his every fiber; he became a domineering, iron-willed autocrat, obsessed by the one idea of his own preservation, and not hesitating to use physical force when force became necessary to lessen his peril.

Repeatedly Speed folded his arms over his stomach, rocked in the throes of anguish, and wailed that he was perishing of cramps; the trainer only snorted with derision. When he refused to don the clothes selected for him, Glass fell upon him like a raging grizzly.

"You won't, eh?" We'll see!"

Then Speed took refuge in anger, but the other cried:

"Never mind the hysterics, Bo.

You're going to run off some blubber to-day."

"But I have to go riding!"

"Not a chance!"

"I tell you I'll run when I come back," maintained the youth, almost tearfully beseeching. "They're waiting for me."

"Let 'em gallop—you can run alongside."

"With all these sweaters? I'd have a sunstroke."

"It's the best thing for you. I never thought of that."

As Glass forced his protege toward the house, the other young people appeared clad for their excursion; their horses were tethered to the porch. And it was an ideal day for a ride—warm, bright, and inviting.

"We are ready!" called Jean gayly. "What in the world—?" Helen paused at sight of the swathed figure.

"Are you cold, Mr. Speed?"

"Climb on your horses and get a start," panted the burly trainer; "he's goin' to race you ten miles."

"I'm goin' to do nothing of the sort. I'm goin' to—"

But Glass jerked him violently, crying:

"And no talkin' to gals, neither. You're trainin'. Now, get a move!"

Speed halted stubbornly.

"Hit her up, Wally! G'wan, now—faster! No loafing, Bo, or I'll wallop you!" Nor did he cease until they both paused from exhaustion. Even then he would not allow his charge to do more than regain his breath before urging him onward.

"See here," Wally stormed at last, "what's the use? I can't—"

"What's the use? That's the use!"

Glass pointed to the north, where a lone horseman was watching them from a knoll. "D'you know who that is?"

The rider was small and stoop-shouldered.

"Willie!"

"That's who."

"He's following us!"

With knees trembling beneath him Speed jogged feebly on down the road, Glass puffing at his heels.

When, after covering five miles, they finally returned to the Flying Heart, it was with difficulty that they could drag one foot after another. Wally Speed was drenched with perspiration, and Glass resembled nothing so much as a steaming pudding; rivulets of sweat ran down his neck, his face was purple, his lips swollen. "You'll have to run alone—this afternoon," panted the tormentor.

"This afternoon? Haven't I run enough for—one day?" the victim pleaded. "Glass, old man, I—I'm all in, I tell you; I'm ready to die."

"Got to—try off some more—leaf-lard," declared the trainer with vulgarity. He lumbered into the cook-house, radiating heat waves, puffing like a traction-engine, while his companion staggered to the gymnasium.

"Y—you'll have to run alone—this afternoon," panted the tormentor.

"This afternoon? Haven't I run enough for—one day?" the victim pleaded. "Glass, old man, I—I'm all in, I tell you; I'm ready to die."

"Got to—try off some more—leaf-lard," declared the trainer with vulgarity. He lumbered into the cook-house, radiating heat waves, puffing like a traction-engine, while his companion staggered to the gymnasium.

"D'you know who that is?"

and sank into a chair. A moment later he appeared with two bottles of beer, one suited to his taste. Both were evidently ice cold, judging from the fog that covered them.

Speed rose with a cry.

"Gee! That looks good!"

But the other, thrusting him aside without removing the neck of the bottle from his lips, gurgled:

"No booze, Wally! You're trainin'!"

"But I'm thirsty!" shouted the athlete, laying hands upon the full bottle, and trying to wrench it free.

"Have a little sense. If you're thirsty hit the sink." Glass still maintained his hold, mumbling indistinctly: "Water's the worst thing in the world. Wait! I'll get you some."

He stepped into the bunk-room, to return an instant later with a cup half full. "Rinse out your mouth, and don't swallow it all."

"All! There isn't that much. Ugh! It's lukewarm. I want a bucket of ice-water—ice-water!"

"Nothing doing! I won't stand to have your epictetus chilled."

"My what?"

"Never mind now. Off with them clothes, and get under that shower. I guess it'll feel pretty good to-day."

Speed obeyed instructions sullenly, while his trainer, reclining in the cosy-corner, uncorked the second bottle. From behind the blanket curtains where the barrel stood, the trainer demanded:

"What did you mean by saying I'd have to run again this afternoon?"

"Starts!" said Glass, shortly.

"Starts?"

"Fast work. We been loafing so far; you got to get some ginger."

"Rats! What's the use?"

"No use at all. You couldn't outrun a steam-roller, but if you won't duck out, I've got to do my best. I'd as lief die of a gunshot-wound as starve to death in the desert."

"Do you suppose we could run away?"

"Hurry up, it's daylight!"

"Where?"

"Come, now, you got to run five miles before breakfast!"

Speed sat up with a groan. "If I run five miles," he said, "I won't want any breakfast," and he laid himself down again gratefully—he was very sore—whereat his companion fairly dragged him out of bed. As yet the room was black, although the windows were grayed by the first faint streaks of dawn. From the adjoining room came a chorus of distress: snores of every size, volume, and degree of intensity, from the last harrowing gasp of strangulation to the bold trumpetings of a bull moose. There were long-drawn sighs, groans of torture, rumbling blasts. Speed shuddered.

"They sound like a troop of trained sea-lions," he said.

"Don't wake 'em up. Here!" Glass yawned widely, and tossed a bundle of sweaters at his companion.

"Ugh! These clothes are all wet and cold, and—it feels like blood!"

"Nothin' but the mornin' dew."

"It's perspiration."

"Well, a little sweat won't hurt you."

"Nasty word." Speed yawned in turn. "Perspiration! I can't wear wet clothes," and would have crept back into his bed.

This time Glass deposited him upon a stool beside the table, and then lit a candle, by the sickly glare of which he selected a pair of running-shoes.

"Why didn't you leave me alone?" grumbled the younger man. "The only pleasure I get is in sleep—I forget things then."

"Yes," retorted the former, sarcastically, "and you also seem to forget that these are our last days among the living. Saturday the big thing comes off."

"Forget! I dreamed about it!"

The boy sighed heavily. It was the hour in which hope reaches its lowest ebb and vitality is weakest. He was very cold and very miserable.

"You ain't got no edge on me," the other acknowledged, mournfully. "I'm too young to die, and that's a bet."

Suddenly the pandemonium in the bunk-house was pierced by the brazen jangle of an alarm-clock, whereat a sleepy voice cried:

"Cloudy, kill that—clock!"

"The Indian uttered some indistinct epithet, and the next instant there came a crash as the offending timepiece was hurled violently against the wall.

In silence Glass shoved his unsteady victim ahead of him out into the dawn.

In the east the sun was rising amid a riotous splendor. At any other time, under any other circumstances, Speed could not have restrained his admiration, for the whole world was a glorious sparkling panoply of color. But to the stiff and wearied Eastern lad it was all cruelly mocking. When he halted listlessly to view its beauties he was goaded forward, ever forward, faster and faster, until finally, amid protests and sighs and complaining joints, he broke into a heavy, flat-footed jog-trot that jolted the artistic sense entirely out of him.

In a Foreign Tongue.

"Madame," said the stranger traveling through one of the back countries of Arkansas to a native in a garden plot near a tumbled-down cabin, "Madame, I see you have some fine spring onions. Could I buy a few?"

"Hey?"

"I would like to buy a few spring onions."

The woman turned in perplexity to her daughter who, hoe in hand, stood unabashed regarding the stranger with curiosity.

"What's he mean, sis?" the mother asked.

"It's ying-uns th' durn fool means, sis; just ying-uns."

snatched it. "Give me that cigarette!"

"I've had enough of this foolishness," Wally stormed. "You are discharged!"

"I wish I was."

"You are!"

"Not!"

"I say you are fired!" Glass stared at him. "Oh, I mean it! I won't be bullied."

"Very well." Glass rose ponderously. "I'll wise up that queen of yours, Mr. Speed."

"You aren't going to talk to Miss Blake? Wait!" Speed wilted miserably. "She mustn't know. I—I hire you over again."

"Suit yourself."

"You see, don't you? My love for Helen is the only serious thing I ever experienced," said the boy. "I—I can't lose her. You've got to help me out."

And so it was agreed.

That evening, when the clock struck nine, J. Wallingford Speed was ready and willing to drag himself off to bed, in spite of the knowledge that Fresno was waiting to take his place in the hammock. He was racked by a thousand pains, his muscles were sore, his back lame. He was consumed by a thirst which Glass stoutly refused to let him quench, and possessed by a fearful longing for a smoke. When he dozed off, regardless of the snores from the bunk-house adjoining, Berkeley Fresno's musical tenor was sounding in his ears.

It seemed to Speed that he had barely closed his eyes when he felt a rough hand shaking him, and heard his trainer's voice calling, in a half-whisper: "Come on, Cull! Get up!"

When he turned over it was only to be shaken into complete wakefulness.

"Hurry up, it's daylight!"

"Where?"

"Come, now, you got to run five miles before breakfast!"

Speed sat up with a groan. "If I run five miles," he said, "I won't want any breakfast," and he laid himself down again gratefully—he was very sore—whereat his companion fairly dragged him out of bed. Business For March.

The month of March the operating income per mile of line decreased 1.4 per cent for the railways of the south and increased 6.6 per cent for the railways of the south and increased 9.4 per cent for the railways of the west compared with March, 1912. The average for the railways of the entire country decreased 0.9 per cent.

This operating income for the 222,086 miles of line summarized by the Bureau of Railway Economics from the reports of the railways to the Interstate Commerce Commission aggregated for the month $52,137,897, or $235 per mile of line, which is equivalent to $7.57 per mile of line per day. Operating income is that proportion of their receipts which remains available to the railways for rentals, interest on bonds, appropriations for betterments, improvements, new construction and for dividends.

The aggregate of the total operating revenues for the month was $241,048,818, an increase of $9,864,272 over March, 1912. The operating expenses were $178,234,167, or $14,104,236 more than for March, 1912. The net operating revenue was $62,814,651, or $4,239,964 less than for March, 1912. Taxes were $10,418,258, an increase of 7.7 per cent per mile of line over March, 1912, leaving the operating income 9.8 per cent less per mile of line as stated.

County Farm Improvement Must Come.

Hardinsburg Ky., May 4th, 1913. Editor Breckenridge News:

I was very favorably impressed by an article appearing in the columns of your paper recently from the pen of Mrs. Chas. L. Chamberlain, of Irvington.

Mrs. Chamberlain is advocating the organization of a County Farm Improvement Association. It goes without saying that such an organization is badly needed in Breckenridge County. The American People have been guilty of sinful waste of the great natural wealth and resources of our Country.

We read that in the middle of the last Century countless numbers of Buffaloes roamed over our western plains, and that a traveler in those sections, would see their carcasses dotting the plains in every direction, having been shot down for their hides, to make buffalo robes, or worse still to gratify the so called sporting proclivities of man.

This slaughter assumed such proportions that the government undertook to stop it, but not until the American Bison was all but extinct.

As the buffalo was exterminated, so the forests of our section of the Country have been laid low. People of my age can well remember when Breckenridge County was clothed with forests of the finest popular, white oak, walnut, chestnut and other valuable timber. The Cincinnati Cooperage Company made the first onslaught, and exhausted whole tracts of matchless white oak to make staves for whiskey barrels and beer kegs. Then came the tie men, and after all of them had made their onslaughts, the timber disappeared.

I can well remember myself when it was customary in different neighborhoods to have what was termed "log rollings." A man would clear up a tract of land and then invite the neighbors to come in and help roll the logs into heaps.

When this was accomplished, the torch was applied, and thus millions of feet of the finest timber a crow ever flew over went up in smoke. But the destruction unfortunately did not stop with the timber. As soon as the timber was removed, the land from which it was cut, was worn out with corn and tobacco, and then another tract was cleared up and "corned," until it was turned out as to poor to raise a crop. This sort of thing has been, or was, carried on in this state until thousands of acres of once fertile soil have been worn out, and are now grown up in broom sage and sassafrass bushes.

The whole system of farming in Breckenridge county has got to be revolutionized. The farmer can no longer go out and clear up ten or twelve acres of timber land. He must improve what he has, and reclaim what has been exhausted.

Besides this the farmer must get progressive and keep step with the age. A man does not resort to Demagoguery when he announces that the farmers as a class do not get a square deal; but at the same time he must say that this is largely the fault of the farmer himself. Instead of standing together the farmers of the state have been at cross purposes on most every proposition, and are fighting each other.

As long as this exists they cannot better their condition. Besides the idea that appeals to me most strongly is the month.

one advanced by Mrs. Chamberlain, to wit FARM IMPROVEMENT

The best way I know on earth for the farmer to improve his conditions is by the improvement of his land.

Hence I approve of Mrs. Chamberlain's idea, to organize a County Farm Improvement Association. If this can be effected, then I believe it would be possible to employ an agricultural expert to come to our County and tell us how to build up our worn out soil in a scientific way. I am interested in farming not only directly, but indirectly also.

Because as everyone knows, ours is an agricultural County and the welfare of all is more or less dependent upon the prosperity of the farmer. I would like to have the public spirited farmers of the County give their views on these matters.

Very respectfully,
Jesse R. Eskridge.

Cures Old Sores, Other Remedies Won't Cure

After The Fire.

The $35,000 paid by Paul Compton's agency will go a long way in helping build up the burnt district.

It will give a lot of work to people, put new life in the town and a new Hardinsburg will be the outcome.

There seems to be no lagging on the part of any of the fire sufferers. They have taken on a new life and a renewed energy. They have left the fire behind and are looking forward to better things.

Architects and contractors are on the grounds making plans, submitting prices and getting ready to push the buildings with vim and energy.

Really the fire has made some old people young. For instance there is Mr. John P. Haswell, Sr., who is a real live wire and has no thought of giving up his job at 76.

And Jim Gardner, who has been on the sick list for several weeks, is a cured man and looks 100 per cent better since the fire.

Taylor Beard lost two store rooms on the corner valued at $2,000. We understand he has been offered $2,000 for the vacant lots.

It looks like a western town on its first legs.

The City Council did a wise thing in passing an ordinance preventing the building of temporary houses on the burnt district. The Bank of Hardinsburg and Trust Co., had already laid the foundations for their temporary quarters but they at once pulled up and moved to Morris Beard's Residence corner, where they are comfortably quartered and are glad of the action of the Council.

The Farmers Bank building is being repaired. The southern corner had to be rebuilt from the ground.

Dr. Royalty has gotten his office over the Farmers Bank cleaned up and ready for business.

Allen Kincheloe's office building is in the hands of the painters. Let us be congratula-

It is estimated that 600,000 lbs. will be needed for the building already planned.

Haswells have a tent on the grounds.

Walker's Bakery will soon be ready for business.

It is an awful sad sight that burnt district.

The fire didn't put the Grand Jury out of business as they returned over 200 indictments, 160 of them being against the Adams Express Co., for violating the Local Option Law.
